Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 01 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Potential for heavy snow over some northern areas on Tuesday.

Today:
Dull and misty start in the south with some drizzle. Drier and colder further north with sunny spells, but snow showers affecting some eastern and northern parts of Scotland. Occasional rain and some hill snow for Northern Ireland later.

Tonight:
Some snow for central and southern Scotland in the evening, whilst a band of rain in the southwest moves north, turning to snow over northern England later.

Tuesday:
Heavy snow for parts of northern England moving north across southern and central Scotland. Much milder to the south with rain then sunny intervals and heavy showers. Cold in north.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Snow showers continuing in the north with the south much milder with some rain or showers at times. Central parts of the UK will see rain and hill snow.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.